SVEN. I buy you anything you want. Any Christmas present.

RITA. Don't be silly, Sven! I know since you are a peasant and I am a simple camerawoman location scout, you can't possibly afford anything for Christmas.

SVEN. I save all my money to buy present for beautiful woman.

RITA. And is that . . . me?

SVEN. Sure I guess.

(RITA is a little annoyed.)

I am joking ya! Ha ha ha ha! You are very attractive. That's how we say beautiful in my country.

RITA. That's how we say not quite that beautiful in my country.

SVEN. I buy something just as beautiful as you are. We find store.

(NARRATOR 1 becomes a store, holds up a giant fake diamond necklace.)

RITA. Wow!

SVEN. Oh ya! I get this for you.

RITA. But it's . . . 78 thousand dollars Sven and you just met me. I'm pretty sure that's a lot of money. I can't accept this.

(To the side:)

I'll just buy it on my own later.

SVEN. (To the side:) As member of monarchy, I can buy whatever I want, but I can't let her know.

RITA. Oh I don't need anything fancy. How about this simple hand-made necklace?

(NARRATOR 1 holds up a necklace made of paper chains.)

NARRATOR 1. My son made this in his kindergarten class!

RITA. It's adorable. I'll take it!

NARRATOR 1. Six hundred dollars.

(RITA is a little thrown.)

SVEN. Sounds like a deal! Done.

NARRATOR 1. I have another one. For you perhaps?

(Produces a second paper chain necklace.)

This one's eight hundred.

RITA. What the heck.

(RITA hands over eight hundred dollars, puts the necklace around SVEN's neck.)

SVEN. This is very special to me.

(SVEN puts the necklace around RITA's neck.)

RITA. I love it.

SVEN. Your neck is very special to me.

RITA. Okay.

SVEN. Because it keeps your head from falling over.

RITA. Right.

SVEN. And I like your head.
